

/rosa residency: open call #1

Artists and scholars who deal with net art and culture are invited to explore web-based practices as well as new forms of art criticism and research. The selected groups and/or individuals will be rewarded with a six weeks residency at /rosa in Berlin Mitte.

The residency program originated in 2022 to support artists, scholars, and writers with a work and exhibition space in Berlin. For each call, the curatorial team selects two individuals and/or groups who may adopt the space for their research.

Who can apply?

Students, artists, and scholars of all disciplines may apply. There is no discrimination of ethnicity, gender, age or abilities. Nevertheless, it is important to point out that the space has stairs at the entrance, which can be a barrier for many. We expect that the selected individuals and/or groups are present in Berlin for the time of the residency. Projects should be carried out in formats that consider accessibility for users, who may range in age, race, gender, economic class, and ability.

What we offer?

Participants are rewarded with a work and exhibition space in Berlin Mitte, with the possibility of hosting events, workshops, and shows. The space has an infrastructure with kitchen, bathroom, heating, work desk, and wifi. We also provide an archive and library on net art and net culture, and the possibility to negotiate with partners about the free use of electronic equipment such as monitors and projectors.

Application format

Submit your research proposal via email to info@netart.berlin, in the form of:

- a headline
- a concept / motivation text in German or English (max. 1,500 characters with spaces)
- a short bio in German or English (max. 1000 characters with spaces)
- a portfolio PDF (images, text, links, etc.)

Timeline Submission

Submission period: now – April 27, 2022

Submissions analysis: April 2022 (3 days)

Residency: early May – June 2022
